Easy power and data management.

Whether coming from the wall, ceiling or floor, Epicenter frames accommodate connectivity needs with a 5-wire/3-circuit solution delivering power to workstations. The frames house and route the cables to keep them out of sight and protected. Each power entry whip has a modular connector at one end and exposed wiring at the other enabling the Epicenter to be hardwired into the building's power. Power entry whips may connect at the end of a workstation or anywhere along a run of workstations supplying power in either one or both directions. Jumpers conveniently plug into the power harnesses of the powered Epicenter frame to supply power to the next frame when continuing a span of workstations.
